Puerto Rico companies transform with Baldrige program

BY CB STAFF

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3, 2013

$23 million is aimed at fixing several bridges across the island, including one of Naguabo’s A690 Blanco, which is under construction. The island’s road network must move beyond the island’s road network and provide the infrastructure to interconnect all transportation plan. Anything that has to do with roads and repairs has to be funded by the government apparatus Torres over,...

Front Page

Continued from previous page

$1 billion to expand PR-22

Torres’ main goal, however, is to establish the new footing for what transportation will be in Puerto Rico over the next 40 years. Torres said, adding that the plan is to use that $1 billion over the next 40 years for major road projects in the island’s northwest region as a whole, Torres Torres said. The project will consist of a 53-kilometer controlled-access toll road that would extend to PR-110, which leads directly to the entrance of the Aguadilla airport as a big hub for infrastructure, airport repairs or future growth of the northwest region as a whole, Torres said. “They are being very aggressive, implementing federal and state funding, but also for fund- ing public-transportation initiatives, including public-transportation initiatives, including the Trin Urban, the Metropolitan Authority (AMA by its Spanish acronym) and the Maritime Transportation Authority (MTA). Legislation will be filed this term to create a new mass-transit authority, which may be called the Integrated Public-Private Partnerships Authority, which is hiring a consultant to undertake a research for the success of mass transit in Puerto Rico. Torres said, adding that the plan is to use that $1 billion over the next 40 years for major road projects in the island’s northwest region as a whole, Torres said. “They are being very aggressive, implementing federal and state funding, but also for fund- ing public-transportation initiatives, including the Trin Urban, the Metropolitan Authority (AMA by its Spanish acronym) and the Maritime Transportation Authority (MTA). Legislation will be filed this term to create a new mass-transit authority, which may be called the Integrated Public-Private Partnerships Authority, which is hiring a consultant to undertake a research for the success of mass transit in Puerto Rico. Torres said, adding that the plan is to use that $1 billion over the next 40 years for major road projects in the island’s northwest region as a whole, Torres said. “They are being very aggressive, implementing federal and state funding, but also for fund- ing public-transportation initiatives, including the Trin Urban, the Metropolitan Authority (AMA by its Spanish acronym) and the Maritime Transportation Authority (MTA). Legislation will be filed this term to create a new mass-transit authority, which may be called the Integrated Public-Private Partnerships Authority, which is hiring a consultant to undertake a research for the success of mass transit in Puerto Rico. Torres said, adding that the plan is to use that $1 billion over the next 40 years for major road projects in the island’s northwest region as a whole, Torres said. “They are being very aggressive, implementing federal and state funding, but also for fund- ing public-transportation initiatives, including the Trin Urban, the Metropolitan Authority (AMA by its Spanish acronym) and the Maritime Transportation Authority (MTA). Legislation will be filed this term to create a new mass-transit authority, which may be called the Integrated Public-Private Partnerships Authority, which is hiring a consultant to undertake a research for the success of mass transit in Puerto Rico. Torres said, adding that the plan is to use that $1 billion over the next 40 years for major road projects in the island’s northwest region as a whole, Torres said. “They are being very aggressive, implementing federal and state funding, but also for fund- ing public-transportation initiatives, including the Trin Urban, the Metropolitan Authority (AMA by its Spanish acronym) and the Maritime Transportation Authority (MTA). Legislation will be filed this term to create a new mass-transit authority, which may be called the Integrated Public-Private Partnerships Authority, which is hiring a consultant to undertake a research for the success of mass transit in Puerto Rico. Torres said, adding that the plan is to use that $1 billion over the next 40 years for major road projects in the island’s northwest region as a whole, Torres said. “They are being very aggressive, implementing federal and state funding, but also for fund- ing public-transportation initiatives, including the Trin Urban, the Metropolitan Authority (AMA by its Spanish acronym) and the Maritime Transportation Authority (MTA). Legislation will be filed this term to create a new mass-transit authority, which may be called the Integrated Public-Private Partnerships Authority, which is hiring a consultant to undertake a research for the success of mass transit in Puerto Rico. Torres said, adding that the plan is to use that $1 billion over the next 40 years for major road projects in the island’s northwest region as a whole, Torres said. “They are being very aggressive, implementing federal and state funding, but also for fund- funding public-transportation initiatives, including the Trin Urban, the Metropolitan Authority (AMA by its Spanish acronym) and the Maritime Transportation Authority (MTA). Legislation will be filed this term to create a new mass-transit authority, which may be called the Integrated Public-Private Partnerships Authority, which is hiring a consultant to undertake a research for the success of mass transit in Puerto Rico. Torres said, adding that the plan is to use that $1 billion over the next 40 years for major road projects in the island’s northwest region as a whole, Torres said. “They are being very aggressive, implementing federal and state funding, but also for fund- funding public-transportation initiatives, including the Trin Urban, the Metropolitan Authority (AMA by its Spanish acronym) and the Maritime Transportation Authority (MTA). Legislation will be filed this term to create a new mass-transit authority, which may be called the Integrated Public-Private Partnerships Authority, which is hiring a consultant to undertake a research for the success of mass transit in Puerto Rico. Torres said, adding that the plan is to use that $1 billion over the next 40 years for major road projects in the island’s northwest region as a whole, Torres said. “They are being very aggressive, implementing federal and state funding, but also for fund- funding public-transportation initiatives, including the Trin Urban, the Metropolitan Authority (AMA by its Spanish acronym) and the Maritime Transportation Authority (MTA). Legislation will be filed this term to create a new mass...